Red Cross Call to Service

YOUR RED CROSS NEEDS YOU!

The dramatic poster by James Montgomery Flagg is the first war poster of the new World War. It is an appeal for a $65,000,000 American war relief fund to feed, shelter, clothe and give medical aid to American men, women and children bombed by the enemy. It is an appeal for funds to provide comforts for our American Army and Navy, and for welfare work for our troops at home and abroad, and their families on the home front. President Roosevelt asks you to give. Your dollars will serve humanity. Give through your local Red Cross Chapter.

RELIGIOUS LEADERS ENDORSE RED CROSS DRIVE

Campaign Opens in Phila. and Four Adjacent Counties

$65,000,000 IS NEEDED

Religious leaders of all denominations have announced their support of the War Fund campaign of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Red Cross, which opened yesterday.

The campaign is being conducted in Philadelphia, Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties for $25,000,000 toward the national fund of $65,000,000 needed for the vast emergency war services of the Red Cross.

His Eminence, Cardinal Dougherty, in a letter addressed to all Catholics in the five counties comprising the territory of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the Red Cross, urged support of the War Fund.

A Committee of Protestant Church leaders have arranged for observance of Red Cross Sunday next week, February 22nd, and a Committee of Jewish ministers have arranged for a similar observance over that week-end in synagogues throughout the city.

Cardinal Dougherty, in his letter, which was published in this week's issue of the Catholic Standard and Times, stated:

"The American Red Cross is extending its great services of mercy to meet the many emergencies arising in war; on the battlefields, throughout our armed forces and among our civilian population.

"Expansion of this work for humanity was begun by the American Red Cross immediately upon the entrance of our nation into the conflict now enveloping most of the world.

"It is hardly necessary to say that I heartily endorse the work of the Red Cross."

"ROMANCE OF OLD GLASS" TOLD BY MR. SLATOFF

Former Bristol Man Delights
Club Members With Fine Presentation

AT A TEA MEETING

"The Romance of Old Glass" as presented to Travel Club members and guests by Lester Slatoff, Trenton, N. J., a former Bristol resident, yesterday afternoon, made a delightfully interesting and instructive subject.

Mrs. Slatoff shared the program of the day with her husband, she singing three pleasing numbers.

Club members and those they had invited to enjoy the afternoon with them, were pleased at the fine presentation of the man who has been a student of old glass and china and of antiques in general during his entire life-time. Not only did he tell of the early history of glass making, but he also mentioned many of the early glass makers and the specialties that marked their art; told of the development of glass from the blowing, down through the periods of advancement in contact, pressed and cut glass. Many pieces displayed by Mr. Slatoff and club members were given individual consideration, and their merits pointed out.

Method of coloring of glass, of advancement in making of designs, etc., were ably presented.

"We have glass all about us, but so often we see through it, rather than 'stopping at it' to consider its beauty of line and design. Many of us seldom think of the struggles and difficulties back of the art and the industry, and of the great effort required to bring about these beautiful pieces. We give little thought to the knowledge required and the work to perfect it."

How the Egyptians were the first to develop the art in its highest degree in the early days was mentioned, they first working mainly on perfume bottles and beads. "The pharaohs and the wealthy put glass beads alongside of their precious stones, so valuable did they consider them. And they were precious, due to the work involved."

At this juncture Mr. Slatoff reminded of the care that should be given old pieces of creative art. "We can't all be creators, but we can be and can teach our children to be preservers of what has been created. We should give great care to these things that add to the loveliness of our homes." The manner in which the Venetians learned the art of blowing glass from the Romans was mentioned, the glass blowers of Venice holding a high position among the populace of that day, and having the privilege of marrying, if they chose, the daughters of the noblemen, the only tradesmen granted such a privilege in that age. "And value of the knowledge and art of the glass blowers being realized, they were sworn to secrecy concerning their methods. Thus the work became quite a commercial as well as an artistic venture back in the 13th century."

The manner in which some old pieces were flecked with gold, or were designed with unusual lines and colors was enlarged upon by the speaker. He told that early Venetian glass was

To Use "Bird-in-Hand" As Center for War Activities

NEWTOWN, Feb. 14—Again the historic sign of the "Bird in Hand," said to be the oldest frame building in Pennsylvania will take its place as a center for patriotic effort and activity in the nation's defense program.

This old frame building, which, during the Winter of 1776, housed the quartermaster depot, is situated at 11 South State street, this borough. It was recently bought and restored by Edward R. Barnsley, who has made an extensive study of local, county and state historic places. Arrangements are being made to fit the property to again be of service in war-time.

The "Bird in Hand" will be turned over for use of local defense organizations lacking headquarters in this vicinity. While details are being worked out, it is expected civilian defense agencies will occupy the various rooms on the second floor, and the first floor will be shared jointly by the local selective service board and the local rationing board.

WORK IN WASHINGTON

Rep. Earl Wilson, Indiana school teacher, all but imposed the fate of Rotterdam on Washington by suggesting that government employees do some work. He not only dared question an ancient prerogative of pay roll baskers, but with intrepid particularity intimated that some of the office girls are not getting as much sleep as their beauty, health and efficiency require.

This is Mr. Wilson's first term in Congress. He has been in Washington only a year. Congress has been working hard all that time, and the rugged taxpayer from Indiana has been among the most diligent of the employed Congressmen. This accounts for the lateness of his discovery that in certain Washington circles a job is regarded as an annoyance that takes too much time from parties and politics.

Probably the shock of discovering that this thing had been going on for some time—about a century—excited him to his extreme observations. He went so far as to propose a 10 o'clock curfew. That's 10 p. m.

The bomb split Washington into two camps. The workers—and there are plenty of them—egged him on in the hope that every one would be required to work. The good-time pay rollers, still a little nettled by the President's suggestion that parasites quit the city, rose to the defense of the unoccupied territory.

It is a disturbing moment in the history of Washington, but time will assert its soothing effect. Washington will sink back into its state of perpetual relapse. Even Representative Wilson may be late for roll call some day.

YEAR'S ACCIDENT RECORD

If one fails to see an intimate relation between 40,000 deaths due to traffic accidents in 1941 and the nation's defense effort, he cannot fail to be unhappily impressed by an increase of 16 per cent over the previous year's record from this cause.

It would be interesting to know the basis of the National Safety Council's conclusion as to the relationship mentioned. It would seem as though some other factor than increased activity were necessary to account for an increase of such proportions.

But in a consideration of the year's accident record from all causes, that point is merely incidental to the council's finding that in 1941 accidental deaths reached the appalling total of 101,500. This is the third highest on record, being exceeded only by the total of 110,052 in 1936 and the total of 105,205 in 1937. Eighteen thousand workers were killed in occupational accidents and 29,000 were killed in off-the-job mishaps. Accidental deaths in homes dropped 3 per cent and public fatalities, not including traffic, dropped a similar figure.

Only six states recorded fewer traffic deaths than in 1940. These were New Hampshire, Colorado, Idaho, North Dakota, Delaware and Wyoming. Forty-one cities of 10,000 population or more completed the year without a traffic fatality.

Hitler has again gone to his mountain retreat, perhaps to await the arrival of the Russians.

Father Goes To School

This old war is fought with horror, Upon this fact we all agree, As we meet our foes in combat In the air and on land and sea.

Now we youngsters fully realize That way times are grim and blue, But in case you catch us grinning, We will pass on the joke to you.

This time it is on Father, For next Monday we have vacation While poor old dad must trudge to school To make out his registration.

If we could look within those walls, To sure would be great fun To see teacher put dad on the spot With a gamut of questions run.

When asked to give the year of his birth He would start counting off on his fingers; Then he would scratch his head and remark That he was not very good at figures.

When asked about his dependents He will answer a trifle bored; But when he must give our ages, Well, that one will have him floored.

Now poor old dad has our sympathy, Yet this war has its compensations, For next time we bring home a poor report, Dad will have more consideration.

And on that fateful day in June, If we miss our examinations, We will remind him of his day at school When he made out his registration.

If MacArthur's gallant men can laugh, As they battle the Japanese, We can forgive the kids their little joke, And buy a Defense Bond—please.

MATA HARI'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA and LEVIA GEORGIE

SYNOPSIS

Sir John Sanderson, British Intelligence chief, has just learned that Mara, his ace woman agent, has betrayed important secrets to the elusive Ajax, head of the Nazi spies in England. His aide, Capt. Hugh Kenley, also reported that a parachutist has landed near London and vanished in an unknown girl's car. Sir John realizes that Mara's treason makes his official position desperate. He must resign or... As he grips his pistol, a familiar voice outside his residential office interrupts. He rushed to the door.

CHAPTER TWO

It was too late; Brinda had put her foot on the threshold. All Sir John could do was to hide his right hand holding the pistol. Then he managed to slip it into the desk drawer, shutting it hastily.

Her entrance changed the whole character of the sombre room, making it suddenly vibrant with feminine life and charm. Certain women have a magic power. Is it the mysterious radiation of their personality? The vibrant persuasive quality of their voices? The magnetism of an irresistible expression in their eyes? At any rate Brinda was one of those girls who, consciously or not, captured attention immediately and whose memory was likely to linger long, especially with impressionable males.

She was a tall girl, with an amazingly white skin, and brilliant eyes, that might have been grey-blue or green. A full, sensitive mouth, a mass of thick black hair above a wide brow. Her slender carving figure breathed grace and conscious beauty. She was strikingly lovely and yet not beautiful in any ordinary way. She was like a white orchid—exotic, exhalant a misty aura that emanated neither from her youth nor from her obvious beauty, but from some strange inner quality of charm. It was reflected in her voice too as she spoke to Sir John.

"Don't blame Hunt, Sandy dear. I fairly had to knock him out of the way. But I had to talk to you." Then as she saw his face more clearly, "Why, darling, what of earth is wrong?" You look as if the Germans had just captured Buckingham Palace.

Sir John called himself with an effort. "Not quite that bad, Brinda, but had enough. Things are getting frightfully modified, I'm afraid."

"Really?" queried Brinda, poising herself on the edge of his desk, dangling a slender silk-clad leg. "Please tell me about it. I've got to know. Everything that concerns you, concerns me too."

"You know I don't like to talk shop at home."

"For a minute she was silent. "Sandy dear—I had a peculiar feeling tonight. . . I can't explain it, but suddenly I felt terrified."

Sanderson looked at her. She was uneasy. Her instincts never failed. Sanderson drew a deep breath. Looking at this full-blooming, alluring girl as she sat so close, feeling the penetrating lure of her intense femininity, breathing the fragrance of youth and life that enveloped her, Sir John found it hard to remember that only a few years ago she had been a big-eyed scared child. Looking at Brinda always filled him with pleasure. She brought back memories of India . . . days and nights of youth . . . the tall swaying palm trees, the scented tropical flowers of the Bengal forests . . . His first emotions as he adopted her, the adorable, sensitive child, homeless, starved for affection . . . Such were the memories that flashed through Sir John's mind before he assured his ward:

"There is no need for you to be afraid Brinda."

"I told myself the same thing. When I came in, I rushed to my little treasure chest thinking that perhaps someone had taken it but it was in the drawer . . . nothing missing."

He put his hand on her soft shiny hair. "Of course not dear. Why should anything be missing? Run along now, I've got some work to do."

New Schedule of Medical Fees in Bristol and Vicinity

EFFECTIVE FEBRUARY 15, 1942

The doctors of Bristol and vicinity wish to present a change in their schedule of fees which they believe will be considered fair to the public and which will, at the same time, help them to overcome a constantly increasing cost of service. Everything used in the practice of medicine, including many medicines and practically all surgical supplies, has advanced sharply in price in recent months.

The definite change is in the minimum charge for home visits, which will be two dollars. For visits out of town, an increased fee will be charged depending on the distance and time consumed. The minimum office fee will continue to be one dollar per person. When expensive drugs or dressings are required, an additional fee will be charged.

The doctors are not unmindful of the fact that some of their patients are living on fixed incomes that have not increased and that an additional expense works a hardship in such cases. Under these circumstances, the doctors will use their judgment and the additional fee may be disregarded.

Physicians, like many other people, are being called upon to devote a considerable part of their time to work connected with our war effort. They are glad to do. However, there is bound to be a relative shortage of medical services, especially in places where war industries are located. If the sick requiring house visits are to be seen promptly, the work of the physician must be systematized. The laity can greatly facilitate this by sending in their calls for home visits at the earliest possible hour in the day. In order to discourage unnecessary evening and night calls, a higher schedule of fees will apply for calls sent in after 5 P. M.

A uniform charge of five dollars per person will be made for premarital examination, including blood test.

BRISTOL THEATRE

For a thrilling screenplay, well directed and enacted by an unusually fine cast, we recommend "Borrowed Hero," which opened last night at the Bristol Theatre. Alan Baxter and Florence Rice are featured in the principal roles.

Charles Starrett rides the range once more in "Thunder Over the Prairie." Currently playing at the Bristol Theatre, the adventure film stars the husky actor as a quick-shooting frontier doctor.

"Go West, Young Lady" comes to the Bristol tomorrow.

RITZ THEATRE

One of the toughest assignments of the Walter Wanger production department during filming of "Sundown," now at the Ritz Theatre, was to quiet down the herd of camels when an important night sequence was being made at the studio. The animals were restless and insisted on moaning in their inimitable manner, entirely upsetting the scenes.

FALLSINGTON TEAM DEFEATS BRISTOL BEFORE BIG CROWD

Sharpshooting Visitors Annex
13th Fray of the Season

FINAL SCORE IS 37 TO 29

Joe Napoli, A New Star, Gives
Spectators A Brilliant
Exhibition

By Jack Gill

A sharpshooting Fallsington High School basketball team annexed a 37 to 29 triumph over a fighting Bristol quintet last night on the local floor. A capacity crowd witnessed one of the most exciting scraps of the season that saw Fallsington slide into a tie for first place in the Big Three Conference with the Bunnies.

The Falcons, who won their thirteenth fray of the season, came to town noted for great scoring ability. Previous to last night's game, they had tallied the outstanding total of 676 points in seventeen engagements. Out of this sum, Art Driscoll has 214 to his credit.

They lived up to their reputation from the very outset, although they had to fight an "all out" ball game to snipe a brilliant last ditch final quarter flareup by the proteges of Bill Bartholomew.

Out of the game there arose a new star in Lower Bucks County basketball play. Clever Joe Napoli, whose number seven jersey flew up and down floor all evening, turned in a sparkling exhibition of individual play. The smooth passing, slick dribbling, aggressive Orange and Black guard set up plays all evening for the victorious outfit. Driscoll was a constant threat with his set shot antics and Monti enjoyed an "on" evening.

Bristol couldn't shake the lid off the basket as they suffered an unfortunate time with their shots. Several times shots rolled out that might have swished through to win the ball game for their cause. Chick Di Angelo played his usual alert brand of basketball and hooked in 11 markers. But it just wasn't the locals' night to win.

Bristol started out missing shots galore in the initial canto, but after a quiet half had been thrown amiss underneath, Melidio and Hopkins clanked to shoot the home forces into a short lived 4 to 0 lead. From that point on Fallsington put on a dazzling show of set shooting from away out and the first quarter ended with the invaders leading by a 13 to 9 count. Monti and Driscoll were particularly laboring diligently during the first eight minutes.

The Bunnies were still being tied up underneath their own basket and Fallsington surged out to a 17 to 10 lead midway in the second chucker. Driscoll, who had been dropping in set shots from past the line, began to dribble and cut in toward the basket to tab layup twin pointers.

Perhaps the second quarter tells the story of the game, for during the eight minutes of action, Bristol could not hit the bucket from the field. The only three markers scored were Di Angelo's three free tosses. The winning combine stepped out to a 21 to 12 halftime advantage. It was all Monti and Driscoll, the former going hot from the pivot.

Bristol suffered the same tough luck on their shots in the third session that found Fallsington outscoring them from the field by a 4 to 2 figure. Melidio and Ruby had the locals' only baskets, while Hopkins made good a charity toss. For the invading quintet, Thropp and Monti found the range.

The thrills were delayed until the final quarter, when a blistering last ditch rally by the Cardinal and Grey brought the crowd to its feet. Six successive points swished through the cords to cut the score down from 29-17 to 29-23. Kenny Hermann opened the final canto by making good on a twist-er underneath and it was 29-19. The crowd caught fire as Ruby tapped in a rebound to cut the Fallsington lead to 29-21. When Di Angelo's left-handed hook hit its mark and the visiting club's advantage was pared down to 29-23, bedlam in the gym broke loose. The game itself turned into a wild affair with aggressiveness and ball scrapping creating more excitement. Napoli took a shot and the ball went clear over the backboard. Ruby missed a pivot try. Fallsington went down floor and Driscoll sunk a long set shot to stick Fallsington ahead, 31-23. A moment later Parr took a nice pass from Napoli across the court and the lead jumped to 33-23. That just about clinched the game. Ruby made good for Bristol on two fouls and it was 33-25, but Thropp was good from the side for Fallsington and the lead jumped to 35-25. Di Angelo cut nicely underneath to keep the homers in the game and Melidio followed this up a few seconds later with a slick overhead stab to make it 35-29. Thropp ended the fuss by tallying an easy shot.

BENSALEM GIRLS BATTLE SOUTHAMPTON TO TIE SCORE ON FLOOR OF THE LATTER TEAM

SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 14.—The Bensalem high school girls and the Southampton girls battled to a 30-30 deadlock in a roughly-played contest on the local floor last night.

The deadlock was costly to the Bensalem team as it lost one of its star forwards, Hazel Lemon. Lemon was charged into during the first quarter and fell, severely injuring her ankle. She was taken to a hospital and did not return home with the team.

So rough was the game and so many fouls being committed that the referee at the start of the contest, G. Lands, asked for assistance. As the coach of the Southampton team Irene Salbro, was the only qualified official she assisted Lands the remainder of the game.

Bensalem held a comfortably 25-11 lead at half-time but this went astray in the second half as the Southampton girls began a scoring surge. Even with a minute to play, the score showed Bensalem ahead in the contest, 30-29, but the scorers detected an error and announced that the corrected score was a 30-30 tie.

Earlier in the season, Bensalem scored a 52-35 victory over Southampton. By their deadlock, the Owlettes kept their winning streak of eight straight intact and the tie will not alter the Lower Bucks County League Conference which Bensalem has safely tucked away.

Hughes with fourteen points led the Bristol Pike girls in scoring while Beans and Shelnire were high for the Southies.

LAST QUARTER RALLY WINS FOR JAY VEEES

By Jack Gill

A sensational last quarter rally erased a Fallsington Jay Vee lead and enabled the Bristol Junior Varsity forces to win a preliminary game from the Falcons by a 32 to 26 tabulation last night. The game was one of the best ever fought in the Bristol gymnasium.

Coach Clarence Bartholomew's team, composed mainly of sophomores and juniors, was paced by two coming prospects in Anthony Cordisco and Ken Maag.

Al Kratzer, tall center, played a prominent role in increasing Fallsington's first quarter lead to 16 to 12 at the end of the first half. Great work by Maag pulled Bristol to within three points during the third quarter that ended with Fallsington still in the lead at 22-19.

Then Bristol put on a spirited drive that saw twelve successive points siff through the basket. "Skamps" Scancelli, a junior, played brilliant ball in the drive and practically did much of the work himself. Scancelli, Cordisco and Maag led a thrilling assault on Fallsington's basket to enable the Bunnies to pull the game from the lost to the win column.

BENSALEM WINS 'LITTLE THREE' TITLE FOR SECOND TIME

Owls Triumph Over Southampton by Score of 27 to 18

EJDYS LED HIS TEAM

Everett's Work at Center Was Big Factor in The Victory

By Jack Gill

Bensalem High School clinched the "Little Three" conference title last night by trimming Coach Claude Lodge's Southampton squad by a 27 to 18 score. It marked the second successive year that Bensalem has won the small school championship and it gives them the license to meet the winner of the "Big Three," which will be Bristol or Fallsington, for the district championship later in the season.

Len Ejdy led the Blue and Grey to their triumph by scoring 10 points. Bill Lamb, who didn't tally many points, nevertheless played outstanding ball on the floor for the winners. Pete Everett's work at center, from where he was good for 7 points, was also a contributing factor to the latest verdict.

Bensalem started the season off rather poorly in the won and lost column, but under the guidance of Coach Woody Wetherhold, the Owls have improved their game immensely. All-round aggressiveness by the entire starting quintet has been mainly responsible for the better brand of ball.

brittle and hard, with decorations thus being required to be painted on. The blowers relied mainly in this type of glass on beauty of form. Little lead was used in early glass, and there is not the bell-like note when struck as is found in later pieces where more lead was used.

The need for proper annealing or cooling was mentioned, glass cooled too quickly cracking, the surface contracting faster than the inner portion. The manner in which glass blowing spread during the next few hundred years as the workers wandered throughout Europe was mentioned, with Queen Elizabeth encouraging the art. "England's greatest contribution to the work was in the lead which was added to the glass. Thus the workmen were able to cut the surface of the pieces and give pattern, style and design. But in the cutting the pieces lost much of their viscosity or watery appearance. The less design and decoration a piece of glass has, the prettier it is. But," added Mr. Slatoff, "art is a personal opinion." He considered the creative, spontaneous, scintillating form of many pieces on display, pointing out how light passing through glass adds to its beauty.

Turning attention to American glass, the former Bristolian told that "Our nation is very fortunate. We have inherited much of the knowledge of the art of all nations. It is a tremendous heritage we have, of the blessings of knowledge in all lines." He traced the history of glass making in the United States, telling of glass blowers being sent from Europe at various times during the 17th and 18th centuries, their ventures not being successful for any long period of time. "They blew small table pieces, and also beads for the most part. And the Indians came for hundreds and thousands of miles to trade fine furs for the little glass beads, so highly did they value them. It was a hard struggle the early blowers here had. They did not have the patronage that the glass makers had in Europe in that day."

Mr. Slatoff reminded that glass as well as other items are collected usually for monetary, artistic or historic reasons. He advised that in visiting museums that one object be studied for five or ten minutes, this being of greater advantage to the visitor than to spend four or five hours covering the entire collection therein. "It is what you take home in your mind that will last throughout life," he reminded.

Bohemian glass, colored in red, was shown; as well as overlay and double overlay pieces; also blown bottles; contact pieces, etc. "We can take a lesson from glass," he continued. "There's a certain beauty and sparkle to glass, and our eyes are our glass. If we give forth the smile and sparkle from our eyes that we should, life will give back much of that sparkle and richness to us." He told that "If the glass industry had contributed nothing to humanity but the microscope it would have done a great job. For the microscope has made for happier and healthier lives."

Mrs. George LaRue had charge of the afternoon program. She introduced the speaker and the vocalist of the day: Mrs. Slatoff, in pleasing manner sang "When I Was Seventeen" (Scandinavian Folk Song), "Blue Danube," and "The Lying Daisy." Mrs. E. Linton Martin, president of the club, opened the meeting.

The presentations were followed by the serving of tea, with Mrs. Emil Metzger and Mrs. Louis Epstein pouring.

Study This Army Collar Insignia and Improve Your Military I.Q.

In wartime there is little excuse for ignorance of the branch of the military service to which a soldier belongs. Note the lapel buttons of the enlisted man and the insignia on an officer's collar. Then study the symbols shown above. It is good memory exercise. Next time you see him you'll know whether he fights with the infantry, builds bridges with the corps of engineers or is an officer on the general staff.
